Is there any other feedback you would like to leave?

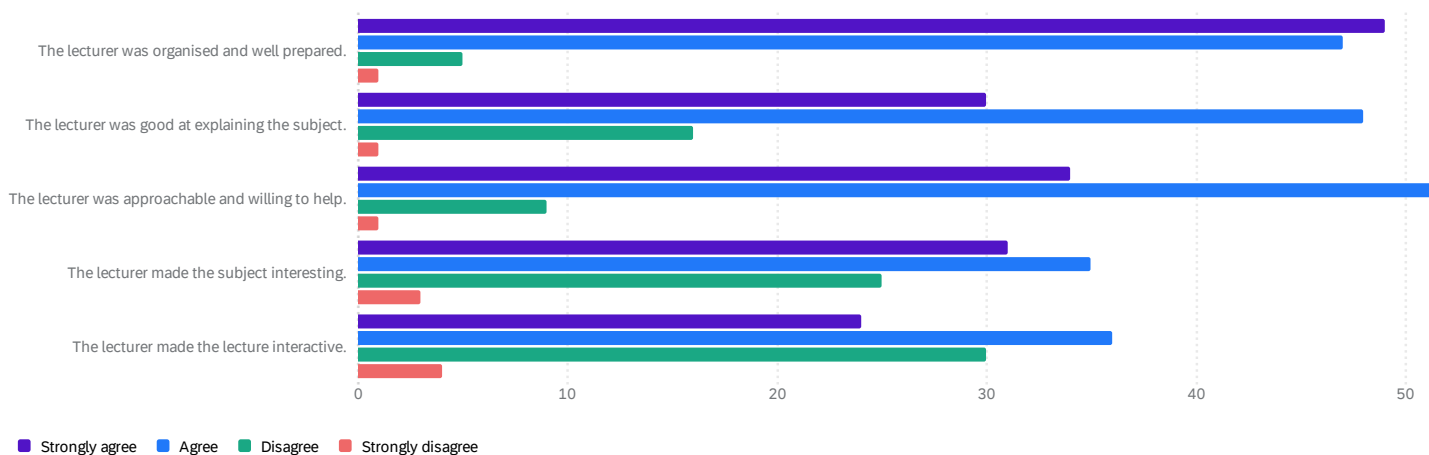

The quality of lecturing on this module this year has been deeply disappointing, particularly given that the material is both foundational and conceptually demanding. Two of the three lecturers had never taught undergraduate economics before, and this lack of experience was very evident in the delivery of the course. The difference between Juan, who is clearly an experienced lecturer, and the other lecturers was stark. His lectures were structured, interactive, and designed to help students understand the intuition behind the material. In contrast, the other lectures often felt unfocused and extremely difficult to follow. There was very little attempt to engage with students or to anticipate the points that are naturally confusing when encountering this material for the first time. In particular, derivations were frequently skimmed through rather than carefully explained, despite the fact that these are often the most conceptually difficult parts of the course. New terminology was introduced without clear definitions and then used repeatedly as if

The Student Feedback Survey (SFS) collects student feedback on subjects and teaching across UTS to support positive teaching and learning experience, by recognising good teaching practice and identifying areas for further improvement. Academic staff are expected to adhere to the UTS Feedback Survey Procedures, and use SFS results as outlined in the UTS Feedback Survey Policy to further improve the delivery of their subjects and support teacher professional development.

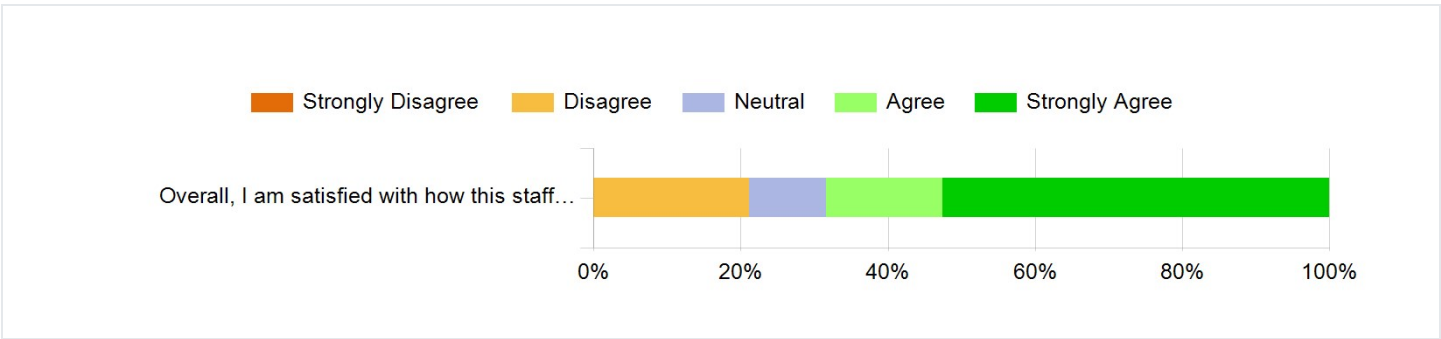

Aggregated survey results are used for University and faculty KPIs for teaching, learning and student experience.

This report includes:

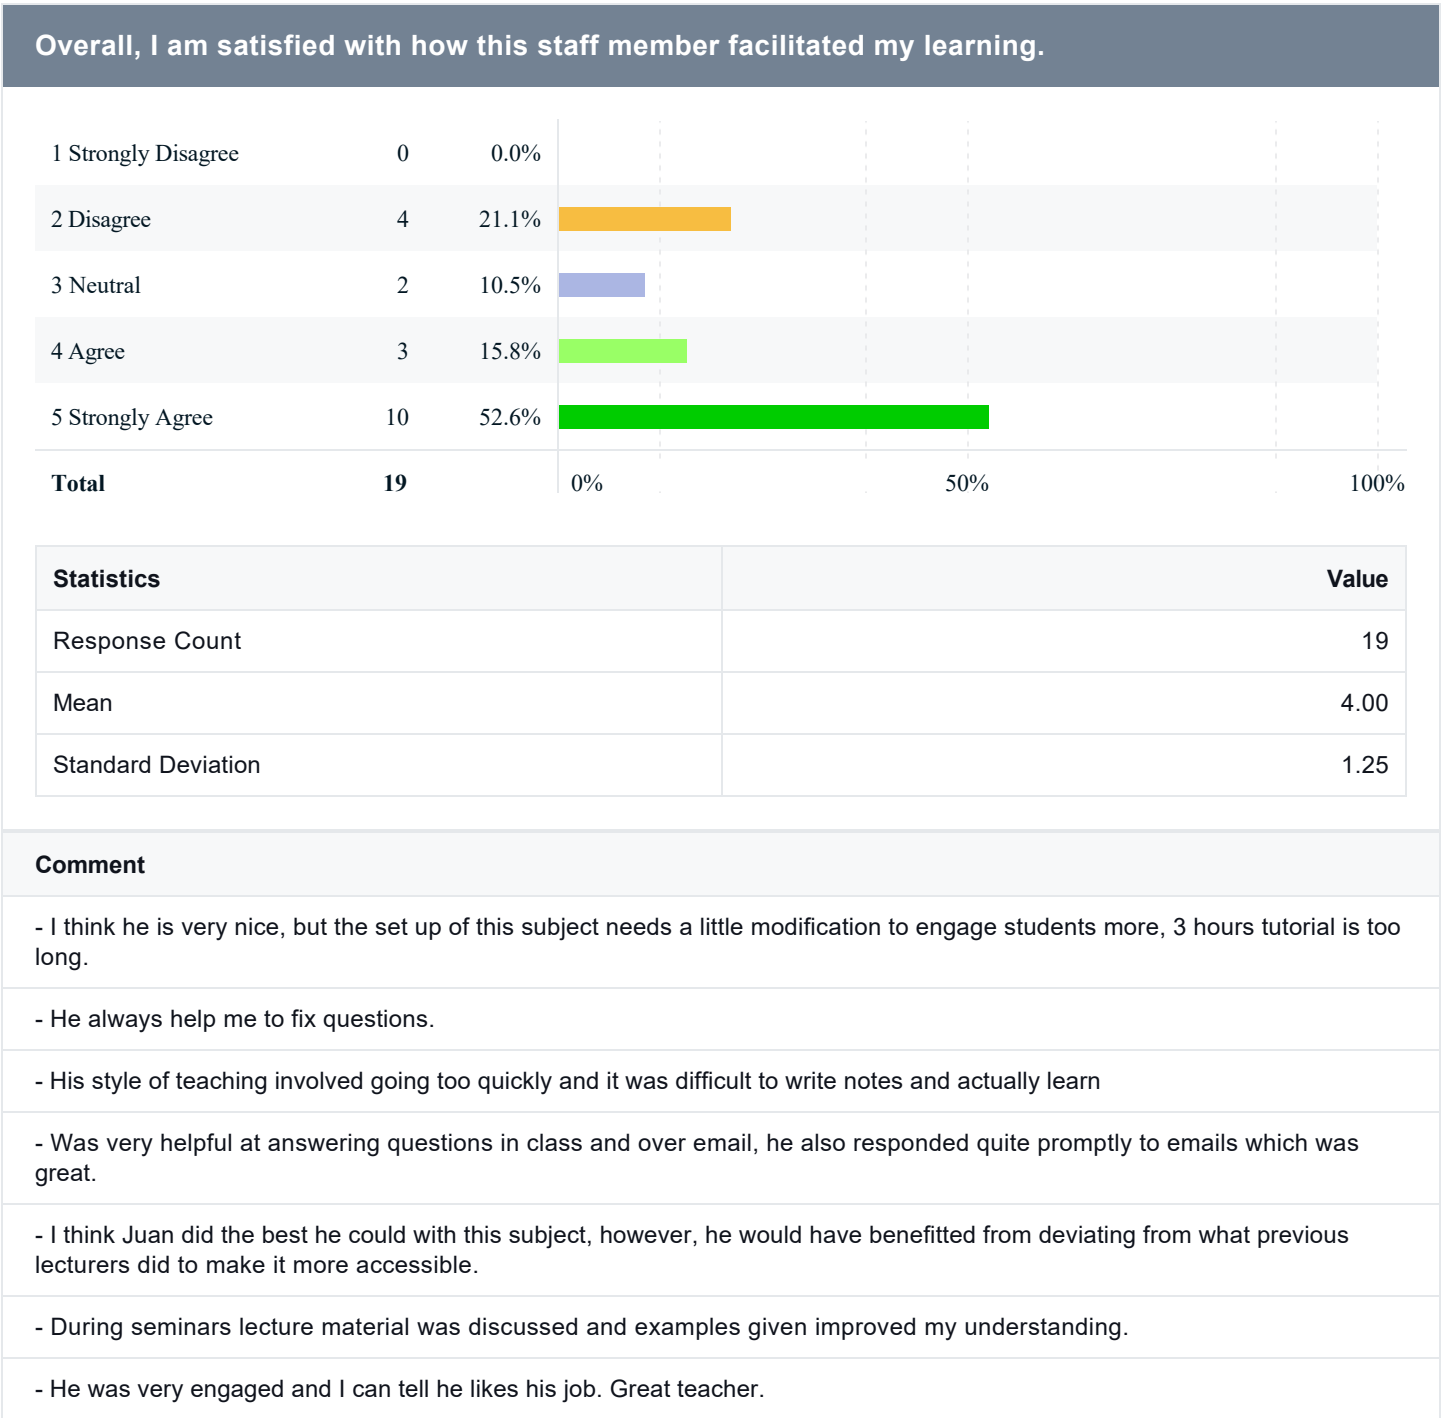

- Individual teacher/tutor results
